Transboundary or Transfrontier Pollution. This is pollution that is generated in one country and is carried via air or water to another country where it causes damage, illness or nuisance. The only way to solve this kind of pollution problem is by international agreement and combined environmental education and awareness to reduce pollution levels. It has been demonstrated that much of the pollution that is killing off (and has killed off in the past) many of the forests in Scandinavia ...

The signatories to the LRTAP Convention include most European countries, as well as the US and Canada. Over the past decade two Sulfur Protocols have been negotiated under the auspices of LRTAP; both were based on acidification concerns. The first, signed in 1985, committed countries to a 30% decrease in sulfur emissions relative to a 1980 baseline.
