A March of Kings by Morgan Rice: This was a fantastic book, with all the elements you need, intrigue, heroic and evil characters, deception and good old fighting. A March of Kings was much better than the first, Thor seems to be a much more balanced character in this book, everything doesn't fall at his feet as it did in the first one.

This second in the series begins to focus on other characters than Thor. Actually King MacGil is the center of the plot which involves his demise and his ghost's call for revenge. (Macbeth??) First paragraphs King MacGil stumbled into his chamber, having had way too much to drink, the room spinning, his head pounding from the night's festivities. A woman whose name he did not know clung to his side, one arm draped around his waist, her shirt half-removed, leading him with a giggle toward ...

Georges Bizet composed L'Arlésienne as incidental music to Alphonse Daudet's play of the same name, usually translated as The Girl from Arles. It was first performed on 1 October 1872 at the Théâtre du Vaudeville in Paris. [n 1] Bizet's music consists of 27 numbers for voice, chorus, and small orchestra, ranging from short solos to longer en'actes. Bizet himself played the harmonium backstage at the premiere performance. Bizet's music contains several folk-like themes for the music but ...

John Philip Sousa was an American composer and conductor of the late Romantic era known primarily for American military marches. He is known as "The March King" or the "American March King", to distinguish him from his British counterpart Kenneth J. Alford. Among his best-known marches are "The Stars and Stripes Forever", "Semper Fidelis", "The Liberty Bell", "The Thunderer", and "The Washington Post". Sousa began his career playing violin and studying music theory and composition under John Esp
