Deep Pluralism: A Practical Approach to Religious Particularism in Conflict Transformation Processes. This piece was written while the author was completing a Master of Arts degree in Peace Studies at the Joan B. Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies at the University of Notre Dame. A peacebuilder in a conflict area may discover that the specific cultural context (on the ground) is in conflict with the liberal peace paradigm to which she adheres.

Some Christians have argued that religious pluralism is an invalid or self-contradictory concept. Maximal forms of religious pluralism claim that all religions are equally true, or that one religion can be true for some and another for others. Most Christians hold this idea to be logically impossible from the Principle of contradiction.
