The books I read in middle school were the ones that stuck with me. I've always loved reading, but middle school was the point where I became a true bookworm – when I'd wait eagerly for the next book in a series I loved, and tell everyone I knew all about my favourite stories, no matter how glazed-over their expressions got.

When I was working on my book Why We Can't Sleep: Women's New Midlife Crisis, I read a raft of studies and novels and articles about various aspects of middle-aged woman-dom. Some made me furious; others made me laugh. My source materials went from Taffy Brodesser-Akner's devastatingly great profile "The Big Business of Being Gwyneth Paltrow" ("We are doomed to aspire for the rest ...
